ISIS's online presence has been a major concern for governments around the world. The group's use of social media has made it difficult to track and monitor its activities. ISIS has also used social media to spread its propaganda and recruit new members in Western countries.

In response to ISIS's online presence, governments around the world have taken steps to crack down on the group's activities. In the United States, the government has created a task force to combat ISIS's online propaganda. The task force is working to identify and remove ISIS content from social media platforms.

The fight against ISIS's online presence is a complex and challenging one. The group has shown a sophisticated understanding of social media and has been able to adapt its tactics to avoid detection. However, governments around the world are committed to combating ISIS's online propaganda and recruitment efforts.
